Brief Report On 31st March, we, jointly with Lead college program, organized a one-day workshop on 'Importance of Oral Tradition in the writing of Local History'. After a formal inauguration ceremony, Professor (Dr.) Niranjan Kulkarni explained the participants the objectives before the workshop. Then, Dr. Suresh Shikhare shared his thoughts on the concept of local history. At the outset, he informed about the 'history' (development) of local history, throughout the world, as an important branch of History. Then, he trained students about methodology to collect data for writing local history. The second session started with Dr. Sarvade speaking on 'Oral Tradition'. With apt examples, she helped students aware of the oral tradition; both as a concept and methodology to collect the data.
